

Reframing Exercise

From the Ministry of Education to All Teachers

Dear Teachers,

The Ministry has become increasingly concerned about the declining standards observed in many of our schools. Recent assessments indicate that students are underperforming across key subject areas, and classroom instruction appears inconsistent and insufficient. Too many classrooms show a lack of innovation, limited student engagement, and instructional practices that do not meet expected benchmarks.

We have also noted that communication with parents is often inadequate, leading to misunderstandings and complaints. Additionally, several schools continue to struggle with basic classroom management, which suggests that teachers are not employing effective strategies to maintain order or motivate students.

While we recognize the challenges you face, it is clear that improvement has not progressed at the pace required. Teachers must demonstrate higher levels of commitment, better preparation, and stronger instructional skills. Without immediate and significant changes in your practice, the education system will continue to fall short of national expectations.

We expect all teachers to reflect on these shortcomings and take necessary steps to address them. The Ministry will be monitoring progress closely.

Sincerely,

Ministry of Education

Use this section to highlight and reframe some of the sentences to make them strength based.

From the Ministry of Education to All Teachers

Dear Teachers,

The Ministry has become increasingly concerned about the declining standards observed in many of our schools. Recent assessments indicate that students are underperforming across key subject areas, and classroom instruction appears inconsistent and insufficient. Too many classrooms show a lack of innovation, limited student engagement, and instructional practices that do not meet expected benchmarks.

We have also noted that communication with parents is often inadequate, leading to misunderstandings and complaints. Additionally, several schools continue to struggle with basic classroom management, which suggests that teachers are not employing effective strategies to maintain order or motivate students.

While we recognize the challenges you face, it is clear that improvement has not progressed at the pace required. Teachers must demonstrate higher levels of commitment, better preparation, and stronger instructional skills. Without immediate and significant changes in your practice, the education system will continue to fall short of national expectations.

We expect all teachers to reflect on these shortcomings and take the necessary steps to address them. The Ministry will be monitoring progress closely.

Sincerely,

Ministry of Education